

Tree Warden Role Description

Aftercare Provider

What is involved?

Young trees require regular attention in order to establish and grow well. The tasks are quite simple and can be easily fitted in with other commitments. They include watering in summer, adjusting stakes and ties, and reporting any problems. The work is entirely practical and suitable for volunteers either working on their own or with others. Most Aftercare Providers are tending one or more trees near their home or place of work but some are happy to be considered for working anywhere as members of a mobile team.

What's in it for you?

- The opportunity to learn new tree-care skills. (no previous tree-care experience is necessary)
- The opportunity to improve your knowledge of trees identification and of nature as a whole.
- Becoming part of a friendly, dedicated and passionate team.
- Meeting others with similar interests
- Improving safe-working knowledge and skills.
- An addition to your CV, especially if looking for new career openings.

Things that Aftercare Providers do:

- Carrying out a range of practical tree-care skills such as mulching, weeding, pruning, stake/tie maintenance and watering.
- Working with others as part of a team, or working alone or in pairs if preferred.
- Answering questions from passers-by (it's O.K. to answer with "I don't know.")
- Reporting incidents or concerns about trees.

This role is voluntary and does not create a legally binding arrangement or employment contract.
